The underground installations at Tarthun (near Egeln, Province of Saxony) have now all been blown up; considerable damage was caused to the village itself by the explosions. Comment: The factory referred to is undoubtedly the Junkers air frame plant known as "Maulwurf", which was in full production during the last few months of the war and occupied 350,000 sq. ft. of floor space on three levels of the potassium shaft mine at Tarthun, at an average depth of 1,600 ft.).
